The Second Sunday of Easter
Divine Mercy Sunday
April 23, 2017

“Blessed are they who have not seen and yet believed.”

TODAY’S READINGS

First Reading- All who believed were devoted to the teachings of the apostles, the communal life, the breaking of the bread, and prayer.

Second Reading- God has given us an undiminished inheritance, safeguarded for us in heaven.

Gospel- The risen Christ comes to his disciples with peace and the Spirit. The absent Thomas doubts .

Comment

After Easter, the apostles went out courageously and told the story of Jesus, his resurrection, and the Good News he brought. Many people believed the words, signs, and wonders of Jesus’ followers. Together they broke bread, prayed, shared stories, and helped one another. Many sold their possessions and used the proceeds to help the less fortunate. The conversion described in Acts is joyful and dramatic. As we look closely at Peter’s letter and John’s Gospel, we see less joy and drama. Peter warns new Christians that it is not always easy to be a follower, but the bottom line is that our souls will be saved. We haven’t realized yet what that means exactly. Its full impact will not be realized until we join Christ in heaven.

John breaks into the story slowly. He begins by telling us that the apostles had gathered, frightened, in an upper room with locked doors. Jesus appears in the room and gently offers them peace. There’s certainly excitement, relief, joy, tears of understanding as the miracle continues to unfold, but even this joy is quieted by Thomas’ reluctance to believe what had transpired while he was gone. Still, the same conditions exist for the apostles and for us today as the early Christians found after Easter. We break bread, pray, share stories, and help one another.
