First Reading - The Lord never forgets the sins of those who take advantage of the poor.
Second Reading - God our Savior wills everyone to be saved.

Gospel - The one who is trustworthy in small matters is also trustworthy in great ones.

Reflection

In the Gospel, Jesus describes the wholehearted effort of a servant who sees “downsizing” heading his way. The steward, through a series of fabrications, creates his own salvation. Jesus commends the manager for being astute enough to use what was entrusted to him in a way that ensured his future. As Christians, we want to ensure our futures as well. Jesus is urging us to use what has been entrusted to us to do just that. But Jesus also urges us to recognize that the treasure we’ve been given stewardship over is not one that can be bartered away—only given away, given and shared freely with others, just as it has been given and shared freely with us.

It seems that we who seek the kingdom of God in the company of our friends need to be as focused and as careful as the steward in today’s Gospel story. We need to assess the gifts we have and then spend them thoughtfully. Our goal is not to secure wealth, but to secure life with God. The gifts we have are to be spent and shared where they will do the most good and where they will yield the most benefits.
